Texas A&M Law Adds New Resources to Its Career Services Office

Professor Lisa Rich and Bob Weathersby join the team.

Fort Worth, TX, Nov. 14, 2017 – Texas A&M Law is adding new resources to its Career Services Office. Professor Lisa Rich and Bob Weathersby are joining the team to work with both current students and recent graduates.

Professor Rich is Director of the Residency Externship Program in Public Policy and has extensive experience working in both the public and private sectors. She is partnering with the Career Services Office to help place students and recent graduates with government and public interest employers. “I am delighted to partner with Career Services to work with our students to place them in jobs that will capitalize on their passion to make a positive contribution to society,” said Professor Rich.

In addition to its partnership with Professor Rich, the Career Services Office has also added Bob Weathersby as its Associate Director. Bob has extensive experience in civil litigation and was a partner in the Dallas offices of both Andrews Kurth, LLP and Jackson Walker, LLP. In private practice, Bob served as a hiring partner and was heavily involved in recruiting and training new lawyers. Bob expressed enthusiasm for the opportunity to join the Career Services Office: “I am excited to mentor students and recent graduates and will work to leverage my network for their benefit.”

“We are very excited that Lisa and Bob will be contributing their talents to help connect our students with employers,” said Interim Dean Mitchell. “Their experience and contacts are deep and varied, and their efforts will make an immediate impact.”
