The concentration in Workplace Law is designed for students who plan to practice what has traditionally been referred to as labor or employment law as either an attorney representing employee plaintiffs or a defense attorney representing employers. Students must have a minimum grade of 2.33 in each graded course used to earn this concentration. The courses provide in-depth exposure to all aspects of workplace law, with an emphasis on both skills and policy. Experiential learning is an important part of this concentration.

Note: Because of curriculum changes made in May 2017, students who matriculated before the Fall Semester of 2017 and have questions about substituting other courses to meet the current Concentration requirements should consult with faculty advisor Prof. Michael Green.

Check only those courses you wish to apply toward the Concentration.
